Beale

Virginia Beale began painting in 2005. Her desire was to learn to use paints in order to convey what she sees in her mind and around her to the canvas, and hopefully to bring the viewers of her paintings to a place of peace, and to remind people how much beauty there is on our beautiful planet!

She speaks of her early inspiration, the French Impressionists, the Hudson River School Painters, as well as the early California Painters, who started the way for many artists following them to bring their interpretations to the canvas with a wide array of variety.

She began painting with oils, and continues to do so. She loves painting outside, as well as in her studio in Ventura.

During her time as an Artist, she has had many accomplishments.
